

AT LEAST 3 VICTIMS DROWNED WHILE TRYING TO CROSS MERIÇ/EVROS RIVER

VICTIMS OF ERDOGAN'S REGIME ARE INCREASING EVERY DAY, AS THERE HAS NOT BEEN AN EFFECTIVE MECHANISM TO PREVENT HIM. ON FEBRUARY 13, TURKISH MEDIA REPORTED THAT TURKEY'S DISASTER AND EMERGENCY ORGANIZATION (AFAD) FOUND THE BODIES OF THREE, INCLUDING TWO CHILDREN, NEAR THE BORDER BETWEEN TURKEY AND GREECE.

Eight Turkish nationals, including three children, two women, and three men tried to get to Greece by crossing the Meriç/Evros river using a rubber boat.

The rubber boat was capsized, and two children, estimated to be around 11 and 3, and their mother drowned. The names of the dead were identified as Ayşe Söyler Abdurrezzak, and her children Abdulkadir Enes Abdurrezzak (11) and Halil Munir Abdurrezzak (3).

The rest of the people that were in the same boat are missing. Ayşe Söyler Abdurrezzak, a 37-year-old teacher, and her husband were dismissed from their job due to crackdowns after the failed coup attempt.

Doğan family was also accompanying the Abdurrezzak family. The members of the family, Fahreddin Doğan, his wife Asli Doğan and their 2.5-year-old son, Ibrahim Selim Doğan are still missing.

Thousands of Turkish families have migrated to Greece from Turkey in recent year. Most of these families are sympathizers of the Gulen Movement. The Turkish government accuses the movement of being behind the 2016 failed-coup attempt. The movement denies alleged involvement.

Since the alleged coup attempt, which President Erdogan defined as a blessing from God, Turkish democracy, and justice have continuously deteriorated every day.

More than 150,000 people have been detained and nearly 60,000 people, including academics, judges, doctors, teachers, lawyers, students, and people from different backgrounds have been put in pre-trial detention.

Tens of thousands of citizens with alleged links to Gülen have been stripped of their jobs or faced legal action, including prison sentences, since the coup attempt. Many of them have reportedly fled the country to escape similar repercussions.

On November 21, 2017, Hüseyin Maden, a 40-year-old teacher, who was also dismissed in the crackdown after the failed coup attempt, drowned along with his wife and three children while trying to reach Greek island of Lesbos.

Hüseyin Maden and his wife were sacked from their jobs as a result of the government's actions targeting everyone in connection with the Gulen Movement.

Moreover, there were detention warrants on their names accusing them of being a terrorist, therefore, it was speculated that the family was trying to escape from Erdogan's autocratic regime in the search for freedom.
